Churches partner together in

Reaching Mixtecs

“I’m showing up out of obedience,” shared Kym Satterwhite. “I really don’t have anything to offer.” Satterwhite is part of the team reaching the Mixtecs — a people group from Mexico who came to the US and struggle to fit into both American and Hispanic cultures — until Odi Mendoza came along.

But in 2021, Odi died unexpectedly from Covid complications. He left behind his wife and four children ... and a new ministry without a leader.

“He was my right hand,” said Ronaldo Muñoz, pastor of Iglesia Bautista Nueva Esperanza in Richmond. He worked closely with Odi to meet needs in the community through the church. “We know that these people need the Gospel,” Ronaldo explained. “They need to know Jesus.”

But now their church is not doing it alone. Bethany Place Baptist Church in Richmond is right beside them. Thanks to your prayers and gifts through Vision Virginia, your church is also a part of reaching the Mixtecs.
