Meeting God
BOBBY OLIVERI

"He is like a tree planted by streams of water that yields its fruit in its season, and its leaf does not wither. In all that he does, he prospers." — Psalm 1:3

The changing of seasons are a perfect opportunity for us to adopt a more steady rhythm in our own lives and return to some level of consistency in the things that really matter. There is no better time to return to your neglected Bible reading plan, to begin family devotions, or develop a new quiet time or study habit. Consistently returning to the means of grace will enrich your relationship with God and deepen your faith.

If you discovered that every morning at 8 a.m. I stopped by my favorite coffee shop for a delicious pumpkin spice latte, and you desperately needed to get a hold of me, what would you do? You'd probably get up early, go to that coffee shop, and wait for me to show up. You'd essentially place yourself right where you knew I'd be. That's how it works with our consistency. We know where God will show up — in His Word, in prayer, and in community. We simply need to meet Him there.

In the ever-changing seasons of life, find consistency by looking to Jesus each day through the well-worn paths of grace —then you will be led to life-long joy.
