“Restore to me the joy of Your salvation and sustain me with a willing spirit. Then I will teach transgressors Your ways, and sinners will be converted to You.” — Ps 51:12–13, NASB

Recently, our 8 year old spontaneously did the dishes and cleaned up the house while her mom was resting. My wife awoke to a handwritten note, “Thank you so much for taking care of us every single day.” Her volunteerism was motivated by a grateful heart.

Our genuine desire to teach transgressors God’s way can only be motivated by the joy of His salvation. How can we securely speak of His mercy and grace when our hearts are weighed down by shame and guilt? David is well acquainted with this struggle having sinned against God with Bathsheba. He repented and pleaded with God for a new heart and a steadfast spirit. He begged God to restore to him the joy that can only be found through forgiveness. Joy and salvation are inseparable. We cannot have true joy apart from salvation. And we cannot authentically share God’s salvation without joy.

Prayer: Lord, restore to us the joy of Your salvation that we might proclaim the goodness of your mercy and grace.
